Community Partnership Committee members announced

Campbell River City Council has appointed seven members (three incumbents and four new applicants) to fill terms that had expired on the Community Partnership Committee (CPC).

Scott Cessford, Lesia Davis and Kevin Weighill were re-appointed, and Gregory Batt, Danna Lamb, Poppy Steele and Mary Storry join the committee for their first term.

The CPC reviews applications for permissive tax exemptions and grants-in-aid, using Council's Finance Policy to determine eligibility, and provides recommendations to Council. The Committee is also sometimes requested for feedback on Council's Finance Policy.

"The City of Campbell River is fortunate to have a number of very active and community-minded advisory commissions and committees, and these volunteers provide important advice to Council," says acting Mayor Marlene Wright. "We greatly appreciate the willingness of these most recent appointees whose expertise will help support non-profit organizations in our community."
