One person treated for smoke inhalation after Nunn Road house fire

One person was treated for smoke inhalation related to a fire at 1868 Nunn Rd. on Feb. 2.

“All occupants were able to escape the fire, however one person was transported to hospital by BC Ambulance Service for smoke inhalation and has since been released,” says Deputy Fire Chief Thomas Doherty.

“At 9:30 a.m., Campbell River fire crews responded to a report of a structure fire at 1868 Nunn Rd., where heavy smoke and fire were seen coming out of windows and the doorway on the front of the single storey residence,” explains the deputy fire chief. “Fire crews initiated a quick attack from the outside to knock down the flames and then moved inside to stop the spread of the fire to the large attached shop at the rear of the house.”

The cause of the fire is under investigation, and the cost of damage is yet to be confirmed.

“The fire damage is extensive in the front bedroom, with smoke damage throughout the structure,” Doherty notes.

“Campbell River fire fighters remind the public that working smoke alarms provide early detection of a fire, which greatly increases the chance of survival and reduces injuries when fires occur. Please make sure you have a working smoke alarm in your home,” Doherty concludes.
